

The Gendlin Online Library

The Focusing Institute invites you to visit the newly-opened Gendlin Online Library, an extensive collection of works by Eugene Gendlin, seminal American philosopher and psychologist. The works cover a period from 1950 to the present and include a number that are unpublished; the Library will be updated as new articles are written.

The Library provides quick and free access so anyone can learn about the Philosophy of the Implicit, Thinking at the Edge, Focusing, and Focusing-Oriented Psychotherapy. The articles in it link to a world wide network of applications and practices stemming from the philosophy, available at www.focusing.org.

Biographic Note

Eugene T. Gendlin received his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Chicago and taught there from 1963 to 1995. His philosophical work is concerned especially with the relationship between logic and implicit intricacy. Philosophy books include Experiencing and the Creation of Meaning, Language Beyond Post-Modernism: Saying and Thinking in Gendlin's Philosophy edited by David Michael Levin (fourteen commentaries and Gendlin's replies), and A Process Model.

Gendlin has been honored three times by the American Psychological Association for his development of Experiential Psychotherapy. He was a founder and editor for many years of the Association's Clinical Division Journal, Psychotherapy: Theory, Research and Practice. His book Focusing has sold over half a million copies and has been printed in seventeen languages. His psychology-related books are Let Your Body Interpret Your Dreams and Focusing-Oriented Psychotherapy.
