

Donata Schoeller, Ph.D., received her Habilitation (the highest university qualification in Europe) at the University of Koblenz. Her doctoral dissertation at the University of Zurich was entitled "Humility." She worked closely with Gene Gendlin over many years and has a deep understanding of the Philosophy of the Implicit. She recently translated Gendlin's A Process Model into German (with Christiane Geiser). With Dr. Ed Casey, she edited a collection of Gendlin's essays: Saying What We Mean. A recent winner of the Rannis Grant of the Icelandic Centre for Research for Embodied Critical Thinking (ECT), she has taught at such universities as DePaul University in Chicago, the University of Chicago, and Columbia University. She lives in Zurich, Switzerland.
