The Society for Humanistic Psychology
American Psychological Association Division 32 Heritage Awards honors colleagues who have made an outstanding contribution to the field of Humanistic Psychology.

The Heritage Awards cover the range of in-depth inquiry, research, and new discoveries and theoretical insights using a broad range of qualitative, quantitative, and integrative methods.

Candidates were nominated by their distinguished colleagues to be carefully considered by the Awards Committee for their impressive academic, leadership, and service in forwarding Humanistic Psychology. The recommended slate was presented to the Division 32, Society for Humanistic Psychology Executive Committee for approval.

The COVID-19 pandemic interrupted the 2020 Heritage Awards ceremony. Today, we gather to honor our 2020 and 2021 recipients!

We are honored to have you join us for this historical moment as this is the first virtual award ceremony. We invite you to leave a memento of kindness and connection on the live message wall. The ceremony will culminate with a virtual toast of the honorees' accomplishments and contributions. Bring your favorite beverage!

Thank you for joining us,
Theopia Jackson, PhD

Constance Fischer, PhD ELEANOR CRISWELL-HANNA AWARD

for

*recognition of professional accomplishments that celebrate
the achievements and contributions
of women in humanistic psychology*

Constance Fischer, Ph.D. is a Past President of SHP/ Division 32 and served on the board for many years. She was professor of psychology at Duquesne University where she remains as Emeritus Faculty. She is an innovator of a humanistic approach to assessment, and published many influential papers and books in the field of humanistic psychology. Dr. Fischer is among the pioneering faculty in Duquesne's psychology department who led the development of their humanistic program and its APA accreditation.

Louis Hoffman, PhD ROLLO MAY AWARD

for

independent and outstanding pursuit of new frontiers in humanistic psychology

Louis Hoffman, Ph.D. is the Executive Director of the Rocky Mountain Humanistic Counseling and Psychological Association and a psychologist in private practice. An avid writer, Dr. Hoffman has edited/authored 18 books and over 100 journal articles, book chapters, and encyclopedia entries. Dr. Hoffman lives his love for existential-humanistic psychology and psychotherapy with his desire to move theory into the practice of living in today's diverse world. He focuses his works in advocacy, social justice, and addressing the intersecting boundaries of race, gender, sexuality and religion. Dr. Hoffman walks his talk daily with family, friends and colleagues.

Sarah Kamens, PhD

for

psychologists no more than 10 years after receiving their doctorate

Sarah Kamens, Ph.D. is an interdisciplinary researcher and clinical psychologist whose work focuses on theories of mental distress, diagnostic alternatives, and phenomenological approaches to extreme states. She earned her doctorate from Fordham University. She was the primary author of the Open Letter to the DSM-5, which launched a movement, has published numerous seminal papers on alternatives to diagnosis and the phenomenology of psychosis, and has guest edited four volumes of JHP on alternatives to diagnosis. Dr. Kamens has served as Member-at-Large of SHP, and has been noted in the newsletter as a rising star in the Division.

Eugene T. Gendlin, PhD

MEMORIAL AWARD FOR LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT

for

recognition of distinguished lifetime contributions to humanistic psychology (within 5 years of death)

Eugene T. Gendlin, Ph.D. (1926-2017) was an American philosopher who developed ways of thinking about and working with living process, the bodily felt sense, and the "philosophy of the implicit". He received his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Chicago and taught there from 1964 to 1995. He was a major influence on Carl Rogers and the development of person-centered theory and practice. His focusing oriented approach to therapy has been enormously influential. He was a founder and editor for many years of the Clinical Division Journal, Psychotherapy: Theory Research and Practice. Dr. Gendlin has been honored numerous times for his development of Experiential Psychotherapy. He is among the most influential humanistic psychologists of all time.

Arthur C. Bohart, PhD

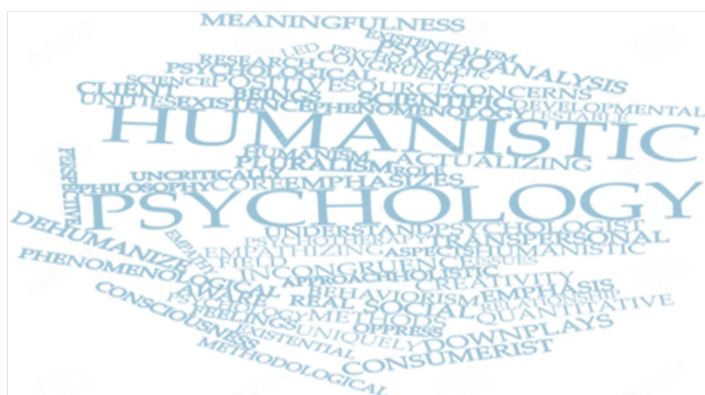

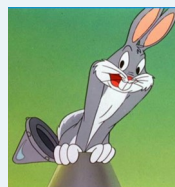

DISTINGUISHED LIFETIME CONTRIBUTIONS TO HUMANISTIC PSYCHOLOGY

for

*an individual in recognition of distinguished lifetime
contributions to humanistic psychology*

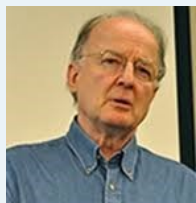

Arthur C. Bohart, Ph.D. has emulated and expanded the work of Carl Rogers. His work has focused on empathy and the client as active self-healer. In addition to numerous publications, the most prominent contributions include fostering the development of future generations of humanistic scholar-practitioners at Saybrook University in the Rogerian tradition, and operationalizing humanistic principles of leadership in academia. Dr. Bohart is a retired professor emeritus. In the service of Division 32, he chaired the Task Force for Creating Guidelines for Humanistic Psychotherapy (1996-2004), served on the editorial board of (1996 – 2002), was Division Fellow (1997) and chaired the Psychotherapy Section of Division 32 of the American Psychological Association (1998-2007). He is currently on the editorial board the Journal of Humanistic Psychology. Dr. Bohart is a 'living library' that has toiled the soil for future generations of humanistic scholar-practitioners.

Steen Halling, PhD

given to
*an institution, and an individual associated with an institution that has made an outstanding and lasting
contribution to humanistic psychology*

Steen Halling, Ph.D. is one of the founders of the humanistic program in psychology, including the Master of Arts at Seattle University. He has published books and articles on phenomenological approaches to the study of human experience, including forgiveness, and pioneered the dialogal phenomenological method. Dr. Halling has also made major contributions to theoretical psychology through the integration of Emmanuel Levinas' work in phenomenology as applied to qualitative research and clinical practice. Dr. Halling, alongside his late colleague, Dr. Jan Rowe, developed the dialogal phenomenological approach to research in their works with graduate students and research on forgiveness, going on to study hopelessness, self-forgiveness, envy, and social activism using that approach.

Seattle University

Department of Psychology

CHARLOTTE AND KARL BÜHLER AWARD

The Seattle University Department of Psychology has been among a few leading institutions teaching clinical psychology from a humanistic perspective -- and in this case, with an emphasis on the relational existential-phenomenological foundations in the philosophies of Martin Buber and Emmanuel Levinas. The Department has also been host to relevant conferences including Psychology for the Other and the International Human Science Research conference.

Constance Fischer, PhD

ELEANOR CRISWELL-HANNA AWARD

for

*recognition of professional accomplishments that celebrate
the achievements and contributions
of women in humanistic psychology*

Dr. Fischer was born in 1938 in Oahu, Hawaii. Thanks to her father's military career, she traveled widely during her early years. Her undergraduate work was done at the University of Oklahoma where she received her B.A. degree with a major in political science in 1960. Her keen interest in political philosophy led her to the works of Sartre and Camus, as well as the existential thought of Kierkegaard and Buber. She received her M.A. degree in psychology in 1963 from the University of Kentucky and her Ph.D. degree in clinical psychology with a minor in philosophy and social psychology in 1966. She worked as a clinical intern at the V.A. Neuropsychiatric Hospital in Lexington, where she came in contact with Drs. Joseph Lyons and Richard Griffith, existential-phenomenological research psychologists.

Fischer met Dr. Amadeo Giorgi at the Lexington Conference on Phenomenology in 1965, and joined Duquesne as an assistant professor of psychology the following year. Throughout her subsequent decades as a faculty member at Duquesne, Fischer developed an expertise in teaching graduate courses on the area of psychological testing and assessment. She developed her own alternatives to traditional theory and practice of assessment, and in ways that met her interest in social responsibility. Her work on co-participation in the area of testing and assessment opened up a fresh and original application of the phenomenological approach to psychology.

In 1985, Fischer published an assessment textbook, Individualizing Psychological Assessment, which teaches her innovative, phenomenological approach to psychological assessment. Over the years, she has published over 60 articles on assessment, qualitative research on privacy, intimacy, and being criminally victimized. She has also been extremely active in various professional organizations of psychology, as well as served as chair on various committees and boards.

Dr. Fischer is now a Professor Emeritus at Duquesne University - FROM THE DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY WEBSITE: <https://www.duq.edu/academics/schools/liberal-arts/academics/departments-and-centers/psychology/departamental-archives-project/early-trailblazers/constancefischer>.

Sarah Kamens, PhD

for

*psychologists no more than 10 years after receiving their
doctorate*

Sarah R. Kamens, PhD is an interdisciplinary researcher and clinical psychologist whose work focuses on theories of mental distress, the evolution of diagnostic concepts, the existential sequelae of structural violence, and phenomenological approaches to extreme states. Her graduate studies began at the European Graduate School (EGS; Saas-Fee, Switzerland) in what is now the Division of Philosophy, Art & Critical Thought. After receiving a master's degree from EGS, she received her doctorate in clinical psychology from Fordham University, where she studied qualitative research methods with Frederick J. Wertz, PhD. Her predoctoral clinical training took place at the Yale University School of Medicine, where she focused on recovery-oriented approaches to adult community mental health. She then completed postdoctoral clinical training at the Yale Specialized Treatment Early in Psychosis program. Sarah spent two years as a Postdoctoral Fellow and Visiting Professor at Wesleyan University. In 2020, she joined the SUNY College at Old Westbury Psychology Department as an Assistant Professor. Sarah is the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Humanistic Psychology (SAGE). She is currently working on a book about a phenomenological-existential reconceptualization of the "schizophrenia" diagnosis. Her ongoing research program focuses on qualitative approaches to reconceptualizing mental distress. She is an assistant professor at SUNY College at Old Westbury.

Eugene T. Gendlin, PhD

for

*recognition of distinguished lifetime contributions to
humanistic psychology (within 5 years of death)*

Eugene T. Gendlin (December 25, 1926 – May 1, 2017), Associate Professor Emeritus, University of Chicago, received his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Chicago and taught there from 1964 to 1995. His philosophical work is concerned especially with the relationship between logic and experiential explication. His philosophical books include Experiencing and the Creation of Meaning, A Process Model, and Saying What We Mean (edited by Ed Casey and Donata Schoeller) all from Northwestern University Press.

Gendlin studied with Carl Rogers, the founder of client-centered therapy, during the 1950s. Gendlin's theories impacted Rogers's own beliefs and played a role in Rogers' view of psychotherapy. Under Rogers' guidance at the University of Chicago, Gendlin developed one of the first outcomes studies on psychotherapy. He worked as a psychotherapist as well as a philosopher throughout his professional life. His books on psychotherapy include Let Your Body Interpret Your Dreams, and Focusing-Oriented Psychotherapy. His popular paperback, Focusing, has sold over 500,000 copies and is translated into seventeen languages. The Gendlin Online Library houses a nearly exhaustive collection of his writings on the website of organization he founded in 1985, The International Focusing Institute.

Gendlin has been honored numerous times for his development of Experiential Psychotherapy. The American Psychological Association's Clinical Division awarded him the "Distinguished Professional Psychologist of the Year" in 1970, while The Humanistic Division of the APA honored him (together with The Focusing Institute) in 2000, and the following year, Division 24 gave him their highest award for Distinguished Theoretical and Philosophical Contributions to Psychology. He has been awarded the Viktor Frankl prize by the city of Vienna and the Viktor Frankl Family Foundation, and in 2017 received lifetime achievement awards both from the World Association for Person-Centered and Experiential Psychotherapies and from the US Association for Body Psychotherapy.

Gene died on May 1, 2017 peacefully at his home in Spring Valley, NY. He is survived by three children and The International Focusing Institute proudly carries on his intellectual legacy. More information can be found at focusing.org/bios/gendlin-bio.

for

*an individual in recognition of distinguished lifetime
contributions to humanistic psychology*

I received my bachelor's degree in mathematics and psychology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, in 1965. I received my PhD in Clinical Psychology from the University of California, Los Angeles, in 1972. For 29 years I was a professor at California State University Dominguez Hills. I was later affiliated with Saybrook University, where I had various roles in administration as well as on the faculty. I retired in 2011. Since then I have done part-time teaching at Santa Clara University. My approach to psychology has always been existential-humanistic. I was originally influenced by the existential philosophers. I had training in Gestalt therapy. Ultimately my orientation became person-centered. In the 1960s and 1970s I was influenced by the community psychology movement, which held that psychological problems had a contextual basis, including being influenced by poverty, racism, sexism, heterosexism, and other forms of social injustice. In recent years I have been involved in the psychotherapy integration movement. In the late 1990s and early 2000s I headed a task force of Division 32 to develop humanistic psychology's own set of principles for practice as an alternative to the empirically supported treatments movement. My particular interests have been experiencing in psychotherapy, empathy, and the creative, generative role of the client in creating change. I've authored a number of articles and authored or co-authored several books, including How Clients Make Therapy Work: The Process of Active Self-Healing; Empathy Reconsidered; Humanity's Dark Side; Constructive and Destructive Behavior, and the recent The Art of Bohart: Person-Centered Therapy and The Enhancement of Human Possibility.

*an institution, and an individual associated with an institution that has made an outstanding and lasting
contribution to humanistic psychology*

When I grew up in Denmark (1944-1956), I never imagined that I would end up practicing and teaching psychology in the United States. My family and I immigrated to Toronto, Canada where I received my BA in psychology from York University. After working at the maximum-security mental hospital in Penetanguishene, Ontario, I changed my major from history to psychology with the goal of becoming a psychotherapist. Having read Martin Buber and R. D. Laing, I wanted to learn more about phenomenology and, accordingly, I entered the psychology program at Duquesne University in 1968. I earned my MA and PhD there while also teaching at Seton Hill University in Greensburg. I started teaching at Seattle University in 1976 where I worked with George Kunz, Lane Gerber, and others to start the MA program in existential-phenomenological psychology. This is indeed an academic community that values collaboration, scholarship, and research,

My late colleague Jan Rowe and I, working with graduate students, developed the dialogal phenomenological approach to research during our research on forgiveness, going on to study hopelessness, self-forgiveness, envy, and social activism using that approach. Also, my publications have focused on the phenomenological study of psychopathology, disillusionment, interpersonal relations, and phenomenological research methods. I have supported the International Human Science Research Conference, a most collegial group, for many years, and was editor of its Newsletter 1988-2017. Also, I am co-editor, with Ronald S. Valle, of Existential-Phenomenological Perspectives in Psychology [Plenum, New York, 1989], and author of Intimacy, Transcendence, and Psychology [Palgrave, New York, 2008].
